

CRITICISED COLONEL AND TAFT IN SPEECH

SEN. WORKS, PROGRESSIVE, MADE
POINTED REMARKS TODAY
IN URGING BILL FOR SIX-
YEAR PRESIDENTIAL TERM.

DEFEAT WAS DESERVED

Attitude Toward Trusts Was Made
Basis of Criticism, and Roosevelt
Was Especially Criticized for Dealing With Perkins.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Dec. 9.—In a speech
today in the Senate upon his resolution amendment that would provide a single six year presidential term
Senator Works, of California, identified
since his entry into the Senate
with the Progressive republican faction
made a strong criticism of Theodore Roosevelt and the Progressive party
for their affiliation with George W.
Perkins and other representatives
of large corporations.

Senator Works declared that both
Roosevelt and Taft, deserved defeat.
He asserted that Roosevelt, when President, had withheld action against the harvest trust with the natural result that Mr. Perkins had been one of the chief Roosevelt backers in the fight this year for the progressive nomination; and, with equal emphasis he declared that President Taft had lost the respect and good will of many good people by going upon the stump against Col. Roosevelt.

The attack upon Roosevelt came in connection with Senator Works' assertion that the President's office had been used to prevent adverse action against corporations.
"We are not without evidence of the effect of such action on succeeding elections," said Senator Works. "The great harvest trust one of the worst and most oppressive of its kind, was significantly favored by Mr. Roosevelt when president, in this respect. It was not prosecuted for violations, of the Sherman anti-trust law because Roosevelt feared otherwise. What was the natural result? When Roosevelt again became a candidate George W.
Perkins, became his ardent supporter and chief financial backer. Perkins was largely interested in the harvest trust. Perkins knew by actual demonstration that his company
would be safe against just prosecution
if Roosevelt were elected, unless he should change his mind. And he would much less likely change his views if the harvest trust or its stockholders should lead him to their support."

"I am not saying that Mr. Roosevelt acted out of improper motives in dealing with the harvest trust or the 'steel trust'. He may have been perfectly satisfied that the course
taken by him was the proper and just course. I call attention to these instances of presidential favor and what followed them, as illustrating the power that exists in the hands of a president in his first term, to secure his election to a second term."

Facts brought out in the senatorial investigation of campaign expenditures
were cited by Senator Works to show the extent to which "trusts and their millionaire stockholders" had contributed to campaign contributions.
He declared that "privileges seeking corporations support the public official
who will grant them privileges."
"The investigation of campaign contributions, lately had, has expressed some of the darkest pages of the political history of the country," he continued.
"It has revealed the unpleasant facts that the money used for campaign purposes, both by republicans
and democrats in past years was supplied wholly by men interested in the large corporations that were amenable to punishment under the anti-trust law."

"The new progressive party was tainted in the very beginning by putting itself in the hands of the same interests. It was managed and financed by promoters, corruptionists and trust magnates. In all these cases money was contributed to secure
the election of a man who, if elected,
would be entrusted with the power
of determining conclusively whether or not they should be prosecuted."

"No matter whether it was so understood or not, it was nothing more or less than buying immunity from such prosecution. They very naturally reasoned that a man who accepted
their money to secure his election
would not use the power their money
had given him to punish them for making
that money unlawfully."

Senator Works referred to the so-called Harriman contribution in the campaign fund of 1904, a fund which Harriman said Roosevelt had asked him to raise but which Col. Roosevelt had testified was raised on Mr.
Harriman's own initiative.

"It is not very material which was right or which was wrong," said Senator Works. "Harriman received his money whether the money was raised for that purpose or not. Suits by the government were at that very time
pending against some of his companies
and after his contributions they were dismissed. His roads were otherwise favored by the President
that his money helped to elect."

A single presidential term, Senator Works declared, would prevent the use of patronage and the power of office in the way it is now used and would remove the opportunity a president
now has to grant favors or indict punishment upon campaign
friends or enemies.

He urged that campaign contributions be made only by the state or nation, declaring that "large campaign
funds, however raised are a dangerous
menace to the free institution of the country."

"The advocacy by the incumbent of his own re-election in the late campaign led to the most shameful campaign of crimination and recrimination
between the president and ex-

president that this country has ever witnessed," Senator Works continued.
"Both of these candidates were overwhelmingly defeated. They both deserved defeat for this reason if for no other. The conduct of Roosevelt was particularly reprehensible. His vicious assaults on the president made it imperative for the latter, in his estimation and that of his friends, to meet on the stump the charge made against him."

"It was a fatal mistake. It lost him
the respect and good will of many good people. He put himself on a level with his detractor and thus lost
his dignity and that of his office to no purpose. How much better it would have been for the country if both of them had been ineligible to re-election."

Mr. Robins in Chicago, sociological activities, has written an open letter

Nineteen Year Old Appleton Youth
Tried to Suicide, Rather Than Receive Sentence for Robbery.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Appleton, Dec. 9.—Rather than go into court this morning and receive a sentence to the reformatory after having confessed his guilt to highway
robbery, George Christy, 19, made an unsuccessful attempt to take his life in the county jail last night by hanging. He made a rope from strips of a blanket and going to the bathroom tied one end to the pipe near
the ceiling and the other around his neck and then jumped from the bath-
tub. Another prisoner who heard him notified the keeper and Christy was cut down. He was in such a condition this morning he could not be taken into court. He was charged with having struck Fred Booth on the head with a brick on January 29, 1911 and robbing him of $85.

pointed a revolver at his head and ordered him to throw up his hands.

pockets.

ROAD CONTEMPLATES LAND PURCHASE TO MOVE SHOPS HERE

Report Says Northwestern Will Buy
160 Acres of Land Near Here.
And Move Fortieth Street,
Chicago Shops.

That the Chicago & Northwestern
railroad company is considering the purchase of one hundred and sixty acres of land near this city for the purpose of moving its shops and yards
at Fortieth Street, Chicago, to this city, is the substance of a report current today. Officials of the company were in the city last week and visited Janesville, with a view, it is said, of establishing the shops in or near Janesville. Steps were also taken in the transfer of the shops from Chicago to this city, it is said, would relieve congested conditions at the Windy City and would mean that Janesville would be the distributing
point of a large share of the business of the company out of Chicago. Rumors to the effect that the officials were considering the change have been current for some time, and credence is now given them by the visit of the officials.

FIVE MURDERERS TO PAY DEATH PENALTY

Hangman's Week at Oregon State Penitentiary—Executions of Some Were Long Delayed.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Salem, Ore., Dec. 9.—This is to be hangman's week at the Oregon state penitentiary, five murderers being doomed to pay the death penalty there next Friday. Several of the condemned men have been under death
sentence for many months, their execution being delayed until the voters
of Oregon passed upon the proposal to abolish the death penalty at last month's election. The referendum showed a substantial majority in favor of hanging, whereupon, Governor West, though personally opposed to capital punishment, declared that he would proceed with the executions.

The five men slated to forfeit their lives on the scaffold are: Frank Car-rison, convicted of killing Roy Perkins in Cass county; Mike Morgan, convicted of killing John York in Josephine county; Noble Pouder,
convicted of killing Louis Gilbert in Klamath county, and John Taylor, convicted of killing Donald Stewart and George Hastings in Multnomah county. Several other murderers are in the state prison under death sentence, but in their cases appeals to the supreme court have acted as a stay.

WOMAN IS ACCUSED OF HUSBAND MURDER

Mrs. Frieda Trost, Charged With Poisoning Spouse to Prevent Changing of his Will.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 9.—That she killed her husband of less than a week
with poison to prevent him changing
his will, in which all of his property
was left to her, is the theory that will be advanced by the prosecution in the case of Mrs. Frieda Trost, who, with Edmund Guenkel, her alleged accomplice is to be placed on trial here
tomorrow on a charge of first degree murder. William Trost, the victim of the alleged murder plot, died on August 7 last. Mrs. Trost and Guenkel, who was a bartender employed in Trost's saloon, were arrested a few days later on the finding of the coroner's jury that Trost
had died of arsenic poisoning. Testimony was introduced at the preliminary hearing to show that Mrs.
Trost had purchased arsenic and also
that she had been very friendly with Guenkel.

SEVERE EARTHQUAKE

Tremors Lasting 23 Minutes Noted on Georgetown Seismograph
Early Today.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Dec. 9.—An earthquake shock lasting 23 minutes and apparently 1300 miles from Washington
in a northwesterly direction was recorded on the seismograph at Georgetown university between 3:44 and 4:07
o'clock this morning. (The tremors
were of considerable severity and were continuous. It is thought that eruptions of the Alaskan volcanoes must have broken out again.)

Recorded at Cleveland.
Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 9.—The seismograph at St. Ignace college recorded several earthquake shocks
early today, beginning at 2:43.35 and ending at 2:56. The seismograph estimated the origin to be 1300 miles distant, probably on the Pacific coast
in southern California or Mexico.

CHANGES SUGGESTED IN PATENT OFFICE

Changes in Patent Office Procedure
Recommended in Report of Economic Commission.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Dec. 9.—Radical
changes in patent office procedure
were recommended to congress today
in a special report by the economy
and efficiency commission transmitted by President Taft. The principal regulations were: limitation upon the life of a patent to 19 years from date
of application, exclusive of two years
during which it may be in litigation;
an increase from $15 to $20 for the filing fee; change in procedure to permit an inventor to appeal from the augmented board of examination in-chief, directly to the court of appeals
of the District of Columbia instead of
through the commissioners of patents
and increases in salaries and force amounting to $236,000 a year. The commission was not authorized to report on the proposal for a court of patent appeals.

ANNUAL CHRISTMAS RUSH TO EUROPE HAS BEGUN

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, Dec. 9.—Nearly a score of transatlantic steamships are scheduled to sail from New York this week taking out about 20,000 steerage passengers. This marks the flood tide
of the exodus of those who go abroad
this year to spend Christmas in their native lands. Steamship officials say
the holiday steerage traffic this year
will about equal the average of the past few years. The prosperity resulting from the bumper crops in the Northwest is reflected in the unusually large number of Scandinavians
from that section who are going over to spend Christmas season in the fatherland.

CHILD LABOR CASE
MOST INTERESTING
IN ITS RESULTS

State of Wisconsin Takes Up Question in Case Which is Nation-Wide in its Scope.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Madison, Wis., Dec. 9.—What is declared to be the most far-reaching
and the most significant prosecution
ever brought under the child labor laws of America, was instituted today by the state of Wisconsin
against the Diamond Match company.
Service was secured this morning
on the officials of the company's big plant at Oshkosh. The action is for the maximum total possible under the statute, which provide for a fine of from $25 to $100 for each specific violation of the child labor
law. The present suit enumerates
two hundred and forty specific violations. With the complaint in the state's action a notice is served, demanding that the company produce
at the trial all its books, records,
time cards, and papers of every
name and nature, showing the facts
in relation to the employment of children.

Result of Inquiry.
The state's action against the Diamond Match company, known internationally as the "match trust," is the result of an exhaustive inquiry
made by the industrial commission
through its deputies of numerous complaints that the company was habitually disregarding the statute.
The results of the investigation, according to the industrial commission,
showed flagrant and serious violations of law. Application was made to Gov. McGovern to have the attorney general join with the district attorney of Winnebago county in bringing about the prosecution. The governor acceded to this request and
the action now is brought by the attorney general in the circuit court of Oshkosh.

For more than a year, the industrial commission has been making every effort, according to the investigation, to assist employers in carrying out the provisions of the law. Those who did not understand it were given full explanation, and every assistance was lent in filling proper forms, posting hours of labor, and keeping the employment of children within specified classes. Only a few employers have been prosecuted so far under the law, these prosecutions being in the criminal courts. The present suit, say the commissioners,
was decided upon only after every effort had been made to bring about voluntary compliance by the "match trust."

Commissioner's Statement.

"Every possible effort has been made to bring about actual compliance with the spirit and letter of the child labor statutes," says a statement issued by the industrial commission today. "Modern civilization
accepts, without question, the belief that children of tender age should not be forced or permitted to engage in the painful occupations. Society's first obligation, in these enlightened
times, is to educate the up-coming generation. However true this belief, it is a fact, nevertheless, that scores of employers and innumerable parents cannot withstand the temptation to exploit child labor. On the one hand, it is cheap and enhances
the financial gains of manufacture.
On the other hand, the labor of children may lighten the burden of parenting. But nowadays we accept without question the conviction that the child must be educated, reared
in a proper environment, and protected from the moral and physical hazards of industry. These are the objects of Wisconsin's statutes on child labor. Laws are enacted in the expectation of obedience. Where obedience is not voluntary, the administrative machinery of the state must come into action. The administrative body charged with the enforcement of these laws in Wisconsin is the industrial commission. And the industrial commission is determined to enforce the law."

Charge 199 Violations.
According to the commission, the Diamond Match company employs a large number of children between the ages of 14 and 16 years. It is charged that some of these children
were permitted to work more than eight hours a day; that some were permitted to work more than forty-eight hours a week; that some were permitted to work before 7 o'clock
in the morning, and that others
were permitted to work after 6 o'clock in the evening. The law provides a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $100 for each offense, and
the complaint treats each day's violation as a separate offense. Under the statute the company, instead of facing criminal prosecution, may be held liable in debt in a civil action,
that is, every time that the company violates the law, it becomes indebted to the state in an amount equal to the fine. The suit is brought on the theory that the company has violated the law in 199 instances,
and each violation is treated as a separate claim for the maximum fine of $100. All these claims are combined in one action, the cumulative fines reaching a total of $19,900.
The Wisconsin laws provide that where money is collected from defendants in actions such as this,
the amount is to be paid into the state treasury, to be used in the support of the common schools.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, Dec. 9.—Progressives in Chicago welcomed Theodore Roosevelt and one hundred and fifty other men prominent in the party from
New York and New England today.
The train bearing this delegation was expected to arrive at noon. A preparatory reception has been arranged for the delegates who tomorrow, and Wednesday will attend the national progressive conference at which more than five hundred delegates are expected to be in attendance. State delegates from all over the country were expected to arrive
today, many women being among them. National Chairman Joseph M.
Dixon, and Secretary N. Davis
were reported to have left Washington in time to join the special from the east. George W. Perkins, Gilford Pinchot and his brother, Amos Pinchot, and former Governor Miguel Ortero of New Mexico are among the delegates already here. Mr.
Perkins refused to discuss the coming conference further, than to say
there were many important matters
to be taken up and he expected that much good would be accomplished
by the meeting. Today's program, it was announced, would include a meeting of the executive committee
and a meeting of the Illinois state committee jointly with the progressive members-elect of the general assembly.

CAN ORDER MILITIA
BEYOND THE BORDERS

Under Terms of Measure the Passage
Of Which is Recommended
By President Taft.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Dec. 9.—That part of the special message sent to congress
by President Taft last week which referred to the militia pay bill puts the fighting force of the country in a new position if the bill carries and there is a good indication that it will, as it was favorably reported by the committee at the last session. The bill provides that the president in time
of war or imminent danger with the consent of congress may order the militia beyond the limits of the United States a thing which is impossible at this time. Had the Mexican situation caused intervention the past summer, the militia or national guard could not have been sent into that country although it was generally believed the Dix bill carried that provision.

England Will Not Curtail Plans for Naval Armament Despite Gift to Canada.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, England, Dec. 9.—All
doubts were swept away of the possibility of Great Britain curtailing
her own naval program in view of the gift by Canada to the British empire of three powerful battleships at a cost of $35,000,000. Winston Spencer Churchill, first lord of the admirality, speaking in the house of commons said he adhered to the point of view of the Canadian government which is, he announced, "that aid given by Canada should be in addition to the existing British naval program and that any steps Canada
might take should directly strengthen the naval force of the empire and
the margin available for its security."

Of Gifts

The Greatest Pleasures of the Christmas Season Comes From the Early Selection of Gifts.

Needless delay makes gift buying a burdensome task—a series of vexing, tiresome and quite frequently disappointing experiences. Many find excuse for such delay in the idea that they must be in the crowds to enjoy full measure of the spirit of the season.

Much of the real joy of gift-giving is lost in the hurried selection and immediate presentation. So let us again emphasize the importance of early Christmas shopping.

This store has successfully developed new ideas in men's holiday merchandise. Good taste is everywhere evidenced.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY HAS SHOCKED COMMUNITY

FINDING OF MARY FIEDLER AND WILLIAM KUNKLE'S DEAD BODIES CLEARS UP THEIR MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.

GIRL WAS MURDERED

Indications Point That Man Clubbed Woman To Death Then Blew Out His Own Brains With Shot Gun.

That William Kunkle deliberately clubbed his wife's sister, Mary Fiedler to death with a shot gun and then blew his own brains out, dropping dead beside the corpse of his victim, is the conclusion drawn from the finding of the two bodies Saturday afternoon, in a strip of woods on the Clark Kidder farm four miles west of Milton Junction.

Kunkle's relations with the girl had been so intimate that she was about to become a mother and it is believed that the woman horrified at her impending shame, had met the man by appointment to consider what was to be done, and that either angered on her request, he struck and killed her with the gun he was carrying or they both agreed to end it all there, by dying side by side.

The first theory is sustained by the appearance of the bodies, the woman's head showing a fracture of the skull on the left side, an inch and a quarter deep and four inches long and one over her right temple, either of which would have been sufficient to kill her. She dropped as hit and lay on the ground as she fell.

That Kunkle evidently lay down beside her, removed one glove and placing the shotgun in a position to reach pulled both triggers at once, completely blowing off the top of his head was found. The blood spattered on the woman and gave the first impression he had shot her, which was later disproved when the body was prepared for burial.

District Attorney Dunwiddie is convinced the man killed the girl and then ended his own life and consequently will not call a coroner's inquest. Both he and Sheriff Ransom viewed the bodies before they were removed from the spot where found and agreed it is a clear case of murder and suicide.

The two bodies lay in a little clump of timber about a half mile from the Kidder home and about the same distance from Kunkle's home on the Alken farm. The girl, who was twenty years of age, lay stretched out on the ground, just as she might have fallen when the blows were struck. Beside her, and to the north with his left hand partly under her body, lay the corpse of the man. His cap and a cotton glove that he had worn on his right hand, were found a few feet away.

Across his body, with the muzzle pointed toward his head, lay the double-barrelled 12-gauge shotgun, with which he ended his life. Both barrels of the gun had been discharged, and in the chamber were the two empty shells.

The discharge of the gun tore off the top of the man's scalp, and scattered the man's brain for several feet around him, spattering on the woman's clothes. A part of the skull was found about five feet from his head.

The girl wore a heavy black skirt, knit jacket, black overcoat and knit mittens, and Kunkle was dressed in ordinary working clothes. In a pocket of her coat was a small bottle of medicine, bearing the label of a Milton Junction doctor. In Kunkle's pockets were found a pocketbook containing twenty-six cents, and a couple of pieces of note paper, on one of which a letter had been started. The bodies were taken to the morgue of Undertaker Kelly in Milton Junction.

Investigation of the circumstances leading up to the tragedy points to the belief that the relations between Kunkle, who was about twenty-three years of age, and his sister-in-law, aged twenty, had been immoral, and that she was about to become a mother. Of late she had divided her time at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Fiedler, at Kunkle's home and at the homes of people for whom she had worked.

On last Wednesday, the day on which the tragedy occurred, she and Kunkle were seen talking together as he was driving to the milk factory, and it is believed that the meeting in the woods was arranged in order that she might talk over with him the trouble he had brought upon her. He was last seen by his wife on Wednesday afternoon about half past one o'clock, when he left the house, apparently to do the work at the barn, and it was not known until later that he had taken the gun with him. The girl left home, supposedly to go to the home of Odey Vein, where she had been working, assisting with the housework.

Relatives of the couple, on hearing of their disappearance, at first believed that the two had eloped, as Kunkle and the girl had been seen together, and this belief was held until Saturday, when a searching party was organized and the bodies were found by Richard Kunkle, a brother of the man.

William Kunkle was about twenty-three years of age, born December 23, 1889. He was married April 4, 1908 to Bertha Fiedler, a sister of the young woman he is believed to have killed, and two children were born to them, one of whom, a child about a year old, is still living. Besides his wife and child, he is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Kunkle of Koshkonong, one sister, Mrs. Emma Sabien of Spooner, Wis., and five brothers, Richard, Leo of Koshkonong, Otto of Lima, Herman of Fort Atkinson and Julius of Koshkonong.

The girl, Mary Fiedler, was twenty years of age, and was born in the Town of Fulton, where she had lived all of her life at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Fiedler. She leaves, besides her parents, four sisters, Mrs. Bertha Kunkle, wife of the dead man, Mrs. Leo Kunkle, of Koshkonong, and the Misses Lizzie and Clara Fiedler, who live with their parents, and three brothers, Louis, who lives east of Milton, William, Jr., residing near Milton Junction, and George Fiedler, who lives with his parents.

"THE THIEF" PLAY OF STRONG APPEAL

Drama of Domestic Complications Gives Opportunity for Interpreting Difficult Roles.

"The Thief" the play by Henry Bernstein produced at the Myers theatre Saturday night, by C. S. Pinrose, is a drama of domestic complication of very difficult roles on the part of those personifying the principal characters. No one who witnessed the performance here could have failed to appreciate the demands made upon Marion Sherwood in the part of Marie Louise Voysin, the wife who stole that she might dress lavishly and retain the affections of her husband which she believed to be languishing. To shield herself from her guilt she persuades Fernand Lagardes, a youthful lover with whom she has trifled to assume the blame. Her labored efforts to deceive her husband, and later, her entreaties when he discovered her culpability, failed to move him from his purpose to see that justice was done. The part of Richard Voysin played by Mr. Emerson, was perhaps the best acted of the cast, though it is conceivable that more fire and jealous indignation would have added brilliance to the personation. Mr. Bogart as "Raymond Lagardes," the father of "Fernand Lagardes" and Mr. Kline in the latter part, proved themselves appreciative of their respective roles. Mr. Plymton spoke his lines clearly and decisively as "M. Gondoin," the detective. Miss Chase carried the part of "Isabelle Lagardes" with creditable dignity.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.
A synopsis of a sermon on the recall, delivered by Dr. Laughlin at the Presbyterian church, last night, will be found in another part of the paper. It is well worth reading because it contains some features which have not been considered.
One is that in only two cities, under commission rule, has the recall been enforced, and in both cases the mayors were removed because they favored a wide open town.
Los Angeles, California, was so overrun with thugs, and disreputable characters, that conditions became unbearable, and finally the law-loving citizens arose in their might and demanded a recall. The mayor was wise enough to resign, and a good man was elected in his place.
The same conditions prevailed at Seattle, but the mayor stood for reelection and was defeated by a large majority. In both cases the recall was the result of lawlessness, and the determination to get rid of it.
The reverse is true in Janesville. The present commission is working as a unit to enforce law, in response to the demand of public sentiment, and this same sentiment will stay by it to a man, if it comes to a reelection, as the result of the recall.
The men responsible for the recall movement are in the minority. They have a real or imaginary grievance. They represent the people who want a wide open town, and any men they select for candidates will be dependent on this element for support.
This thought was also brought out by Mr. Laughlin. He went so far as to say that no self-respecting man could afford to be a candidate, against the present commission, where the only issue is law or lawlessness.
There is food for thought in the suggestion, and men can afford to think twice, and then think again, before deciding to ask the suffrage of the people on such an issue.
If an election is ordered, the present commission will be the people's candidates. It isn't a question of men, but far more important than that, because a great principle is involved, in which every home in the city is vitally interested. Any attempt to cloud the issue will be futile. It is so clearly defined that most of the men, and all of the women in the city understand it.

FIFTY PLUS OR FIFTEEN.
One of the grievances entertained by the promoters of the recall, is the committee of fifteen. According to one man's statement, "we have sixteen mayors instead of one." That is a far-fetched argument and hardly worth considering, as the people generally understand that the committee of fifteen was created to aid in the enforcement of law, by moral support.
Back of the committee are the people who believe in a clean and wholesome city, and they represent the homes and a large majority of the voters. It might be well to remember that under the old council system the city had a self-appointed committee of fifty plus. It was a strong committee and its influence was potent, but what did it represent? The wide open town, and nothing else.
This arrogant committee fought the commission form of government. Why? Because it was opposed to the enforcement of law. It is well represented in the present recall movement, for the same reason.

If the citizens made any mistake in creating the present committee, it was in not making it numerically stronger. The membership could have been one hundred, as well as fifteen, and had a mass meeting been called this number could have been multiplied by ten.
The crusade now going on is not a spasm of virtue. It passed the spasm period, early in the campaign, and has now become epidemic; not very violent yet, on the surface, but a strong undercurrent that will be felt, when occasion demands, and unless all signs fail, the issue of a wet or dry town, may be the final climax.

Governor Bleas of South Carolina, is a second edition of "Pitchfork" Tillman, only worse, as the conference of governors, in session at Richmond, discovered to their disgust. The South Carolina governor believes in mob law. He has practically emptied the state prison by pardoning the inmates, and when reminded that he should have some respect for the Constitution, replied: "To hell with the Constitution." The state is humiliated but helpless, as the governor has captured the mob, and is now planning to land in the United States senate.

The discovery has been made that the high price of eggs is not due so much to the neglect of the hen, in performing her duty, as to the cold storage fiends who have been bottling up the supply for several months. The government has taken the matter in hand, and the fact has already come to light that Chicago warehouses have in storage more than 1,600,000 cases of eggs. In the general scramble to unload, price was no object. Some plan should be devised to prevent this kind of corner.

There is only one issue on the recall proposition, and all attempts to cloud it, will be futile. It is simply a question of law or lawlessness. The present commission stands for the enforcement of law, hence the grievance. No business man in the city can afford to array himself against law and order.

If the natural color of oleomargarine was yellow, some way would be discovered to tax it out of existence. We are great people to strain at gnats and swallow camels when self interests are affected. In the meantime butter is so much of a luxury that many people are obliged to do without it.

But Sky Star, an Indian girl whom one of the young men had won as a sweetheart, starts off to warn the military post, on a perilous ride that is one of the features of the play. Here is shown most astounding horsemanship. But her warning does not avail to prevent one detachment of troopers from being cut to pieces and the whole military post surrounded by an immense horde of Indians, far outnumbering the whites. The battle for life, the ruses to gain time, the clever scheme by which the young Colonel was sent for aid, and the martyrdom of the young Indian girl Sky Star, complete one of the most dramatic stories ever presented in film. Building A Monopoly
CAPITALISTS CAN NOT BUILD UP A MONOPOLY WITHOUT THE AID OF THE CONSUMERS.
A monster petition was sent to Washington last March asking congress to enact a parcels post law. That petition was made up of thousands of letters from farmers and other small consumers.
The petition was headed by congress and an experimental parcels post system will soon be in operation.
Why a parcels post? Because the great mass of consumers want to send their money away from home to buy what they need. Millions of them are doing that very thing now and they want the government to make it easier for them.
The Standard Oil Company for years was pictured as the crowning iniquity of a monopolistic age. The Beef Trust, the Sugar Trust, the Tobacco Trust, and many others were and are anathematized.
Yet the very men who are up in arms against the monopolies mentioned are helping to build up another monopoly that threatens to cast a blight upon every small city and town in the land. The parcels post system is designed to aid in this work.
Twenty years ago the catalogue and mail order houses were an experiment. Today they are drawing trade from every county in the United States and centralizing the retail trade, just as the trusts centralized the production of special lines of commodities.
Do you see the point? A monopoly in oil may be bad; a monopoly in tobacco, beef, matches, or any other article of commerce may be of enough import to change the political complexion of congress or unseat a president.
But how about a monopoly of the retail trade of the country? If something is not done to check the growth of these mammoth corporations they will soon be in a position to control every household necessity from the house the family lives in to the paper of pins they use daily.
The mail order, catalogue buyers are helping to build the most gigantic Monopoly ever planned by the mind of man.
Year by year they are feeding a monster that in the end will devour them if they do not open their eyes to the truth in time and kill it.
And when they have built up the Monopoly they will rush to Congress and ask for relief from the results of their own folly.
"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." If each community shall unite in an effort to build itself up, increase its trade, keep its capital at home, and work as a unit for commercial, industrial, social and moral betterment, there will be no need to call on the state legislature or congress for protection.

NAT C. GOODWIN in "OLIVER TWIST"
Coming
A novelty in moving picture entertainment will be seen at the Royal Theater next Thursday, Friday and Saturday when, "Oliver Twist" with Nat C. Goodwin in the part of Fagin will be given film form. Mr. Goodwin has recently been acting this famous Dickens' character in an all star revival of the play in New York city. All the other parts are well taken and Mr. Goodwin's vivid portrayal of the old Jew who instructs boys in the ways of crime is highly effective and interesting.
The continuity of the story is well preserved, the acting being so skillful that no point is missed, and the costumes and scenery are complete in detail and historically accurate.
The story of "Oliver Twist" is so well known that any explanation is unnecessary, but each scene or grouping of characters is plainly labeled, and the management furnishes the audience with programs so that the action is readily followed.
Miss Vivian Burns gives an excellent interpretation of Oliver and Miss Beatrice Moreland is seen effectively as Nancy Sykes. Miss Moreland is the lady who induced Mr. Goodwin to plunge from a boat into the surf on the Pacific Coast recently, and Mr. Goodwin is still in the hospital as the result of that interesting and romantic experience.
The story of "Oliver Twist" is given in its entirety. The performance occupying the greater part of two hours.

The Romantic Thames.
Among the great commercial streams of these islands the Thames is the only one open to romantic feeling, from the fact that the sight of human labor and the sounds of human industry do not come down its shores to the very sea, destroying the suggestion of mysterious vastness caused by the configuration of the shore.—London Magazine.

Most Ancient Idea of Humor.

The oldest idea of humor is surprise. This the child exhibits when it hides and cries "Boo!" both surprising and frightening its senior. One may find this primal sense of humor distributed through the modern short story. Poems which end contrarily to their foreshadowings are of this sort.

CHRISTMAS MUMMERY FOR CHILDREN ONLY

Celebration of the Great Holiday the World Over Always Includes Santa's Mythical Visit.

At the Gazette office Santa's mail bag is gradually filling up and by the night of the seventeenth, when it starts for the mythical home of St. Nick, it will carry many messages from his friends throughout the county. Write on one side of the paper only. Write plainly and be sure and have your letters in the mail bag by Tuesday December 17th so they will reach their destination.

One writer discussing Santa says, the mummery part of Christmas is and has been for children. They would feel lonesome without a Santa Claus of some kind. The original of this merry old saint was named Nickolas, and he became Bishop of Myra when very young. After his death he was canonized as the saint for children, and in his memory was established a festival that began December 6, but was afterward transferred to Christmas Day. In olden times in England the churches chose a choir-boy to represent the saint. Properly costumed this lad went round his parish and was given money and sweetmeats. In later times, say a century and a half ago, the boys of England were still keeping up the customs of their saint's festival. On Christmas Day they went into the churches singing, carrying on their arms baskets of nice red apples, with a sprig of rosemary in each. They gave the fruit to the congregation, receiving in return fourpence or sixpence, according to the station in life of the giver. It was the old-fashioned boy who stirred the heart to goodness and broke the gloom of winter night with his Christmas carols.

But England does not hold a patent on the day or its day; though Anglo-Saxon does the most of the celebrating. The saint is credited with going round the world in twenty-four hours, starting in the middle of the Pacific ocean on the 180th meridian of longitude; though the children of Finland and Norway think of him living among the icebergs of the north pole, and on Christmas night scooping through the air on a sledge drawn by four reindeer.

In Germany the father's big boots often take the place of the regulation stocking. The peasant boys of France use wooden shoes as gift holders, and the day's saint is a clown in cap and bells. Austrian boys and girls are a good way behind the times; for they are still sticking to the original St.

HOOSIER STATE'S FIRST LADY COP

Getting Down to Facts.

Henry Ward Beecher was once called upon to visit a family, all of whom were ill. The good sister said: "Brother Beecher, I suppose it is the will of him who knoweth best." Scarcely were the words uttered ere she met with the just reproof from her pastor: "It's no such thing; it's that stinking cabbage in your cellar."

Nothing There to Find.

"Well, Blinks," said Dobbiegh, "I see that they have just had their commencement up at your boy's college. How did he stand the examination of his mental baggage?" "All right," said Blinks, "they didn't find anything dutiable."—Harper's Weekly.

No Task.

"Do you believe, as some teacher says, that boys ought to be encouraged to fight?" "Well, about in the same degree that ducks ought to be encouraged to swim."

Meredith on French Criticism.

I hold strongly to the value of French criticism, whether in praise or blame. The latter is done by the masters in the art) with so fine an irony that it instructs without wounding any but the vain person; and the eulogy confers green laurels instead of gilt. England has little criticism beyond the expression of likes or dislikes, the stout vindication of an old conservatism of taste.—Meredith's Letters in Scribner's Magazine.

LYMAN HOWE.

The title of "Travel Festival" will be more than justified at the Myers Theater December 25 and 26 matinee December 25, when Lyman H. Howe will take stay-at-home travelers to the imperial abode of the former sovereigns of France, Versailles, with its world famous fountains, shaded avenues, groves and lawns peopled with a multitude of statues. Here among scenes of unparalleled splendor will be shown the Gallery of Mirrors, 240 feet long, the bedroom of Louis XIV and the study and clock room of Louis XV. The magnitude of the palace may be better conceived when it is remembered that if you wanted to walk through all the rooms and corridors you would have to travel seven miles. Throughout its entirety it is dazzling in its splendor. The beauty of the immense park is almost bewildering and forms a setting well worthy such a gem of man's handiwork.

Whaling, the burial of the Maine, the sea industry, a thrilling race between a hydroplane and an 800 horse power motor boat in the harbor of Monaco and an exciting adventure with a ferocious lion are only a few of the other features on a program that is entirely new, excepting only that amazing botanical study entitled "The Birth of Flowers," which Mr. Howe will present again in response to popular demand. No other reproduction that he has ever presented has elicited such numerous requests for another presentation and it is in deference to this wide demand that he offers his patrons another opportunity to peer into one of nature's greatest secrets.

"THE GIRL AND THE DRUMMER."
Does anybody realize the hardships a drummer, selling goods on the road, has to encounter? He gets into town, goes to call on his customer, finds the man he has to sell goods to, has the customer and a group on. The drummer must meet him with a pleasant smile and "How'dy do," and open up the conversation with "Nice Day."

Fred Byers in his new vehicle, "The Girl and the Drummer" will portray the character of the drummer in full view of the audience at the Myers Theater on Tuesday December 10.

Every role in "The Girl and the Drummer" is played by a real artist; especially selected to portray their respective characters. The play is embellished with elegant special scenery for each and every act.

"THE THIRD DEGREE."

Charles Klein was prompted to write "The Third Degree" after reading of the execution of the wrong man for the crime, to which he confessed after having been subjected to a fourteen hour examination by the police. Several years after the execution the guilty party confessed and died in prison. Mr. Klein, when he read the details, became so wrought up that he forthwith arranged with Henry B. Harris for the production of the play, and that he struck a popular chord is best shown by the legislation and court rulings against preliminary investigations of the police of the large cities. "The Third Degree" will be presented at Myers Theater, Saturday December 14, matinee and evening.

THOMAS W. ROSS IN "THE ONLY SON."

"The Only Son," one of the most interesting plays of comedy and real heart interest ever attempted on the American stage comes to the Myers Theater, Tuesday evening, December 17, with Thomas W. Ross, famous for his work in "The Fortune Hunter," and "Checkers" in the name part. After a short road tour the play is to return to New York City where it will open one of the new theaters. The play already has three months to its credit in that city in addition to six months in Chicago and record-breaking runs in Boston and Philadelphia. Some idea of the impression "The Only Son" has made in the cities where it has already been played may be gained from the following editorial from the dignified Journal the Chicago Tribune. "Quite a remarkable drama is on show here now. This is Winchell Smith's, 'The Only Son' current at the Gaiety with Thomas W. Ross a featured player. It presents with astonishing directness a present day domestic problem and serves it, if not conventionally, at least reasonably and through it runs that strong current of human appeal which keeps an audience at attention from curtain to curtain."

NEW FIRE HOSE TESTED WITH THE FIRE ENGINE

City Officers and Officials of Water Company And Janesville Machine Company Present.

Mayor James A. Fathens, Councilman Roy M. Cummings, Superintendent William W. Hyzer of the Janesville Water Company and Superintendent Fred L. Smith of the Janesville Machine Company witnessed a thorough test this morning of the new fire hose purchased by the city. A section chosen at random tested with the test pump withstood a pressure of 600 pounds to the square inch, the most severe test ever given hose in this city. Six of the fifty sections were coupled together and attached to the fire engine which took water from the raceway at the rear of the Blodgett mill. A stream was thrown under a pressure of 250 pounds, more than is usually encountered under actual service conditions. No defect of any kind was found. A section of the hose was then cut open and a strip of the rubber lining subjected to an elasticity test. A strip of this would stretch nearly twice as far as one of the same size taken from some hose purchased from another firm some time ago and found to be defective. The Janesville Machine company was interested in the test for the reason that they had recently bought 600 feet of hose from the Bi-Lateral Hose company, the firm from which the city purchased its new hose.

NO OIL HEADLIGHTS FILL REQUIREMENTS

Railroad Commission Finds That Locomotive Headlights do Not Comply With the Law.

In response to numerous requests from railroad officials, the railroad commission Saturday gave an opinion upon the subject matter of section 1809v of the laws of 1911, relating to locomotive headlights, with reference to the kinds of lights which the railroads have proposed to use in compliance with the law, in which it is held:

"That none of the oil headlights fulfill the requirements of the law."

"That the commercial acetylene headlight with the 18-inch reflector and equipped with a cluster of three burners, each having a capacity of one-half cubic foot per hour, fulfills the requirements of the law, provided the reflector is kept well polished and in good condition."

"That the Pyle National electric headlight fulfills the requirements of the law, but that certain restrictions in its use should be recognized."

"That there are probably other power headlights than those above named that have sufficient illuminating capacity to comply with the law."

The law of 1911 required that steam railroads should, on or before July 1, 1912, equip all locomotives, except such as are used exclusively for switching service or in railroad yards and not elsewhere, with a headlight of sufficient candle power, measured with a reflector, to throw a light in clear weather that will enable the operator to plainly discern an object the size of a man at a distance of not less than 800 feet, and thereafter to maintain and use such headlights upon every such locomotive when it is operated at night time.

When the time drew near for the law to go into effect the railroad officials solicited the commission to investigate and report upon the merits of certain headlights which they proposed using and as a result of that solicitation the commission made the investigation upon which the report is based.

Seven different headlights were made subjects of the inquiry, three of which were oil burners. The commission finds that none of the oil burners fulfilled the requirements of the law.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

TO SPANK OR NOT TO SPANK.

"DEAR FRIEND:

Please give your opinion on the subject of why mothers should spank their children or should not. My opinion is that they should when needed. Also at what age.

The above terse little note was signed by a "Miss." Somehow I imagine her to be a stern young aunt, who looks with disfavor upon the way her married sister "spares the rod and spoils the child."

Seriously, the little note opens up two subjects about which I have often thought. First, is corporal punishment good for children? Second, at what age should discipline begin?

It's quite a while, isn't it, since I have had a symposium of my reader friends' views on any subject. How is this for a chance to start the ball rolling again? This is a subject upon which almost all women and some men are likely to have very decided opinions. Let's have them. Maiden aunts and mothers of twelve, fathers, and even old bachelors who have ideas on this subject, are urged to contribute their theories and experience.

To start the discussion, here are a few of my humble opinions.

As to whether corporal punishment is advisable or not; it seems to me the only answer to that is—that depends. There are some children who can be managed without corporal punishment and some children who simply cannot. It is a matter for study.

I don't think corporal punishment is such a terrible thing as some people consider it. To me, it is infinitely better than some other forms of discipline such as frightening or threatening a child. I don't believe in spanking. I think the average mother's spanking simply makes a child mad and doesn't hurt it very much. A switch is both better and easier. If you are going to make pain the punishment of misdeeds, be sure you really inflict pain.

Never punish a child when you are angry. That's too much like revenge. Make him realize that the whipping is a consequence of his misdeeds, not your way of avenging yourself for the trouble he has caused you.

The word consequence reminds me that the very best punishments to my mind, are those which fit the sin. A mischievous little boy, had a trick of pulling his baby sister's hair. Spanking did no good. One day his mother punished him by pulling his hair; that eventually cured him.

The age at which discipline should begin is a vital question. I know a mother who thinks it is very strange that she cannot control her child despite repeated punishments. She forgets that up to the time he was two years old she made no attempt at discipline, and that, during that time, his naturally strong will gained tremendous headway. It seems to me that as soon as a child is old enough to throw his toys down for the pleasure of seeing them brought back, he is old enough to be taught that his mother isn't going to do that and to be disciplined if he persists.

What do you think? Let's have a real nice chat about it.

dry a few moments before taking from the bag. This, in case it is made on the same day on which it is to be served. If made ahead, let hang in the bag until Christmas morning, then put into a pot of boiling water and cook for an hour before serving. Turn out on a hot platter, decorate with greens, tuckling a little bunch of holly on the very top, pour a little brandy around it and set on fire just before bringing into the dining room.

Serve with a hard sauce composed of well beaten butter and powdered sugar with any flavoring preferred, or with a French sabbon sauce.

Christmas Plum Pudding No. 1.
One cup of sweet finely chopped, two cups bread crumbs, one cup vinegar, one cup seeded raisins, one cup nuts, chopped well, one-half cup citron, one cup sour milk, one teaspoon soda, dissolved in the milk, one teaspoon cloves, two teaspoons cinnamon, one-half of grated nutmeg, four eggs well beaten. Flour your fruit well from one pint flour and add the rest to the pudding. Boil or steam four hours.

Christmas Plum Pudding No. 2.
Three cups sifted flour, one cup seeded or seedless raisins, one-half cup thinly sliced citron, one cup sugar, one cup chopped walnuts, two tablespoons olive oil, one-half teaspoon each of cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg and grated lemon peel. One teaspoon soda, one teaspoon salt, four eggs thoroughly beaten, sour milk to make a thick batter. Steam four hours. Serve with lemon sauce made with one cup of sugar dissolved in one pint of hot water. When the water comes to a boil, stir slowly into it a tablespoon of whole wheat flour, rubbed smooth in one-half cup of cold water. Let boil ten minutes; stir in a lump of butter, a sprinkle of nutmeg, and pour it over a thinly sliced lemon. Serve cool.

Christmas Plum Pudding No. 3.
Three cups grated bread crumbs, two cups chopped suet, three cups seedless raisins, chopped, one-half cup each currants and citron, one cup sugar, one-half teaspoon each salt, nutmeg and cinnamon, five eggs, beaten, two level teaspoons flour, made into a thin batter with milk. Steam four hours.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Fresh Winter Greens.
I had green celery and parsley all last winter.

Take a window box filled with good, rich dirt, or large flower pots. Sew seeds of parsley and celery. It will grow in a short time.

Always clip the largest leaves for soup and seasonings.

For the Kiddies.
It is best not to give the children horns, whistles, or any toys that are likely to put into their mouths.

Every child that visits them will try these toys, which makes them not only insanitary but positively dangerous. Visiting children may have tubercular tendencies.

Things Worth Knowing.
To Keep Milk From Freezing—Get a small wooden box. Inside of this put a pasteboard box just large enough to hold a quart bottle. Between pasteboard box and wooden box I filled in with sawdust. In the pasteboard box my milkman left my milk, and by this simple arrangement I never had any of my milk frozen.

In washing white silk gloves, I always have trouble in their turning yellow, but the following will prevent this: If, after washing the gloves, they are hung in a dark closet to dry, instead of out in the sunlight they will look as good as new, and will not be discolored. This, of course, applies also to any white silk articles.

Christmas Pudding and Fruitcake.
Pudding—One tablespoon butter stirred with two tablespoons brown sugar until creamy; then add one egg and after beating thoroughly, add one cup sifted flour to which add 1-1/2 level teaspoons baking powder.

Add one cup milk, then beat in another egg and one cup old bread crumbs crumbled very fine. Stir in half cup seeded raisins and dried currants, one-fourth cup broken or chopped walnut meats, the grated

SOME UNUSUAL DISHES.

When making bread, save out a pint of the dough and add two table-spoonfuls of brown sugar to it; a pint of dates; knead well and set to rise. This will make two large loaves.

German Caraway Bread.—Four two cups of scalded milk on two table-spoonfuls of sugar, add a table-spoonful of salt, two table-spoonfuls of butter, and when lukewarm add an yeast cake dissolved in a half cup of water; then add six cup-fuls of rye flour and two table-spoonfuls of caraway. Knead, using whole wheat flour. When risen, shape into loaves and let rise again.

Ham Timbales.—Dissolve a table-spoonful of gelatine in a half cup of hot water, add two cups of cold boiled ham, finely chopped; season with mustard, cayenne and add a half cup of cream, beaten stiff. Turn into a mold and chill thoroughly. Remove and garnish with parsley. Serve with the following sauce: Beat a half cup of heavy cream, add three table-spoonfuls of mayonnaise dressing, two table-spoonfuls of grated horseradish, two table-spoonfuls of vinegar and a half table-spoonful each of prepared mustard and salt.

Canadian Halibut.—Melt a fourth of a cup of butter, add two and a half table-spoonfuls of flour, and when well mixed, two cups of milk and two cups of cold cooked flaked halibut. Season and add a table-spoonful of anchovy essence. Serve hot on squares of buttered toast. Garnish with toast points and parsley.

Potatoes fried crisp and brown, with chopped red peppers as a flavor, are not common. Add a cup of chopped celery to the hot potato salad.

Nellie Maxwell.

Word "Chore" Not Slang.

The word "chore," generally used in the plural, is not slang, but an English word of highly respectable lineage. In this form it is found only in America, in England the spelling and pronunciation being "char," though this is rarely used except in combination with "woman"—"char-woman." But in some of the provincial dialects, that of Cornwall, for example, the word "chores" is used precisely as we use "chores." All these forms come down to us from the Anglo-Saxon word "cerr," or "cerran," to turn over.

Rare Happiness.

There is no rarer piece of happiness than to find the morrow confirm the experiences of the bygone days; too often the morning light in opening our eyes at the same time shuts our hearts.—Carmen Sylva (Queen Elizabeth of Roumania).

CHATS WITH THINKING WOMEN

by Barbara Boyd

Has Old-fashioned Advice Lost Its Value?

"It's all very well," the quiet girl was saying to the little group of intimate friends, "for mother and aunt and grandmother to insist on a girl's being ladylike and retiring and modest and all that. But if she does, she gets left."

"What's the trouble, Phoebe?" chorused the group. "No particular trouble," blithely returned Phoebe. "But I was just thinking such advice is out of date. If a girl takes it nowadays, it'll make her a wall-flower and eventually an old maid, or I suppose I should say, bachelor girl."

"Something has gone wrong," said one of the girls sagely. "Did you know Sue Dickinson is married again?" asked Phoebe. "No!" ejaculated the others. "Who to?" "Kenneth Leaverett."

"You don't mean it!" "Yes I do. And that's what set me to thinking upon old-time advice. In spite of everything her parents said, she ran away, you remember, and married Ned Willoughby. Then she quarreled with him and finally got a divorce. And now in less than a year, she is married again. And here are all of us, quiet, ladylike, well-bred girls, hanging yet on the parental stem."

"Huh!" said one indignantly. "I wouldn't want to marry either Ned Willoughby or Kenneth Leaverett." "That may be," replied Phoebe. "But even if you had, you wouldn't have had the chance. You're not forward enough. I don't want to get into personalities," she said hastily, as she saw a gleam in the other girl's eye. "I'm just drawing deductions. As you know, I was invited to a house-party last week, out at Whitney's perfectly superb home. And who do you think was the most popular girl there, quiet, well-bred little me or charming Alice Markham? Not a bit of it. It was a loud, giggling individual who talked constantly, laughed constantly, played jokes on the men, kept herself in every way possible in the centre of the stage. The men simply flocked around her. They hovered over her like bees over a flower. And the rest of us sat off in well-bred and ladylike quiet and talked to each other."

"That sort of thing doesn't last," observed one. "She had a good time while it did last though. And that's more than the rest of us did."

"I wouldn't care for the attentions of men like that," said another. "Oh, they were good enough, as men go," replied Phoebe. "You have to take them as they are. You can't make them to order."

"Seems to me then," said a fourth, that the men are to blame for all the forwardness and flippancy in girls, and the way they dress and all the other things they do that they shouldn't. It would be sort of comfortable to blame the men for it all, wouldn't it?" "They won't care," quoth Phoebe. "They'll go right on showering all their attentions on the girl with the most false hair and the biggest hats and the tightest skirts and the readiest laugh, whether there is anything to laugh at or not."

"Let them," interrupted another. "There's something more to life than merely pleasing the men. If I prefer refinement and good breeding and good taste, or think they are right and their opposites wrong, I am not going to throw them over merely to win masculine favor. I think we ought to get down to the bedrock fact of what is right and worth while, not merely to whether our conduct will win fleeting popular favor. We want those things in our character that are going to give us lasting satisfaction. And believe me, none of us here would find lasting satisfaction in the regard of men who like vulgarity in dress and manner. And believe me, too, the nicest men don't. And even if they seem to for a little while, it is either out of idle curiosity, or to put in time, or a mere passing fancy. I'll stick by the advice of mothers and aunts and grandmothers. They have been observing human nature a much longer time than we have, and they know how it wears."

"Well," said Phoebe, "I suppose the girl with high standards of conduct is of more value to society than the girl without them. And I suppose it is worth while to be of some value somewhere."

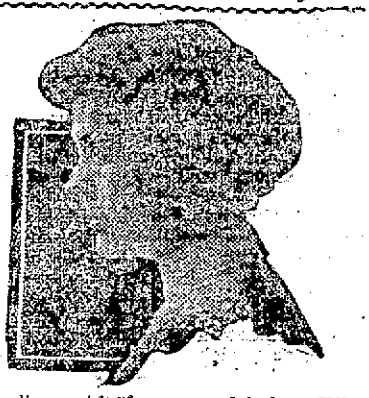

"And I'd rather have my self-respect," said another, "than the attention of a dozen men for doing something that I thought beneath me."

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am 28 years old, a married woman. My weight is 248. My husband would like me to get some thinner. How can I reduce? My husband is mean to me and won't provide for me and baby. What can I do? You are very heavy. If you are healthy, the only thing that will reduce flesh is simply not eating all you want. Just cut your food supply down half, and leave out all sweet, starchy and fat foods. Eat lean meats, drink lemon juice in hot water, take plenty of exercise. This will mean self-denial, but if you will persist you will begin to lose flesh in two or three months.

If your husband will not provide for you and the child, take the matter to court. The court will see that he pays you enough for your support. Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are two young school girls and have come to ask your advice. There is a boy

MRS. L. friend known to one of us five years, to the other over a year. We were just friends and never paid much attention to him except in a friendly way. All at once he began making love to one of us and when he was with one he would talk of the other. At last we found that he was deceiving.

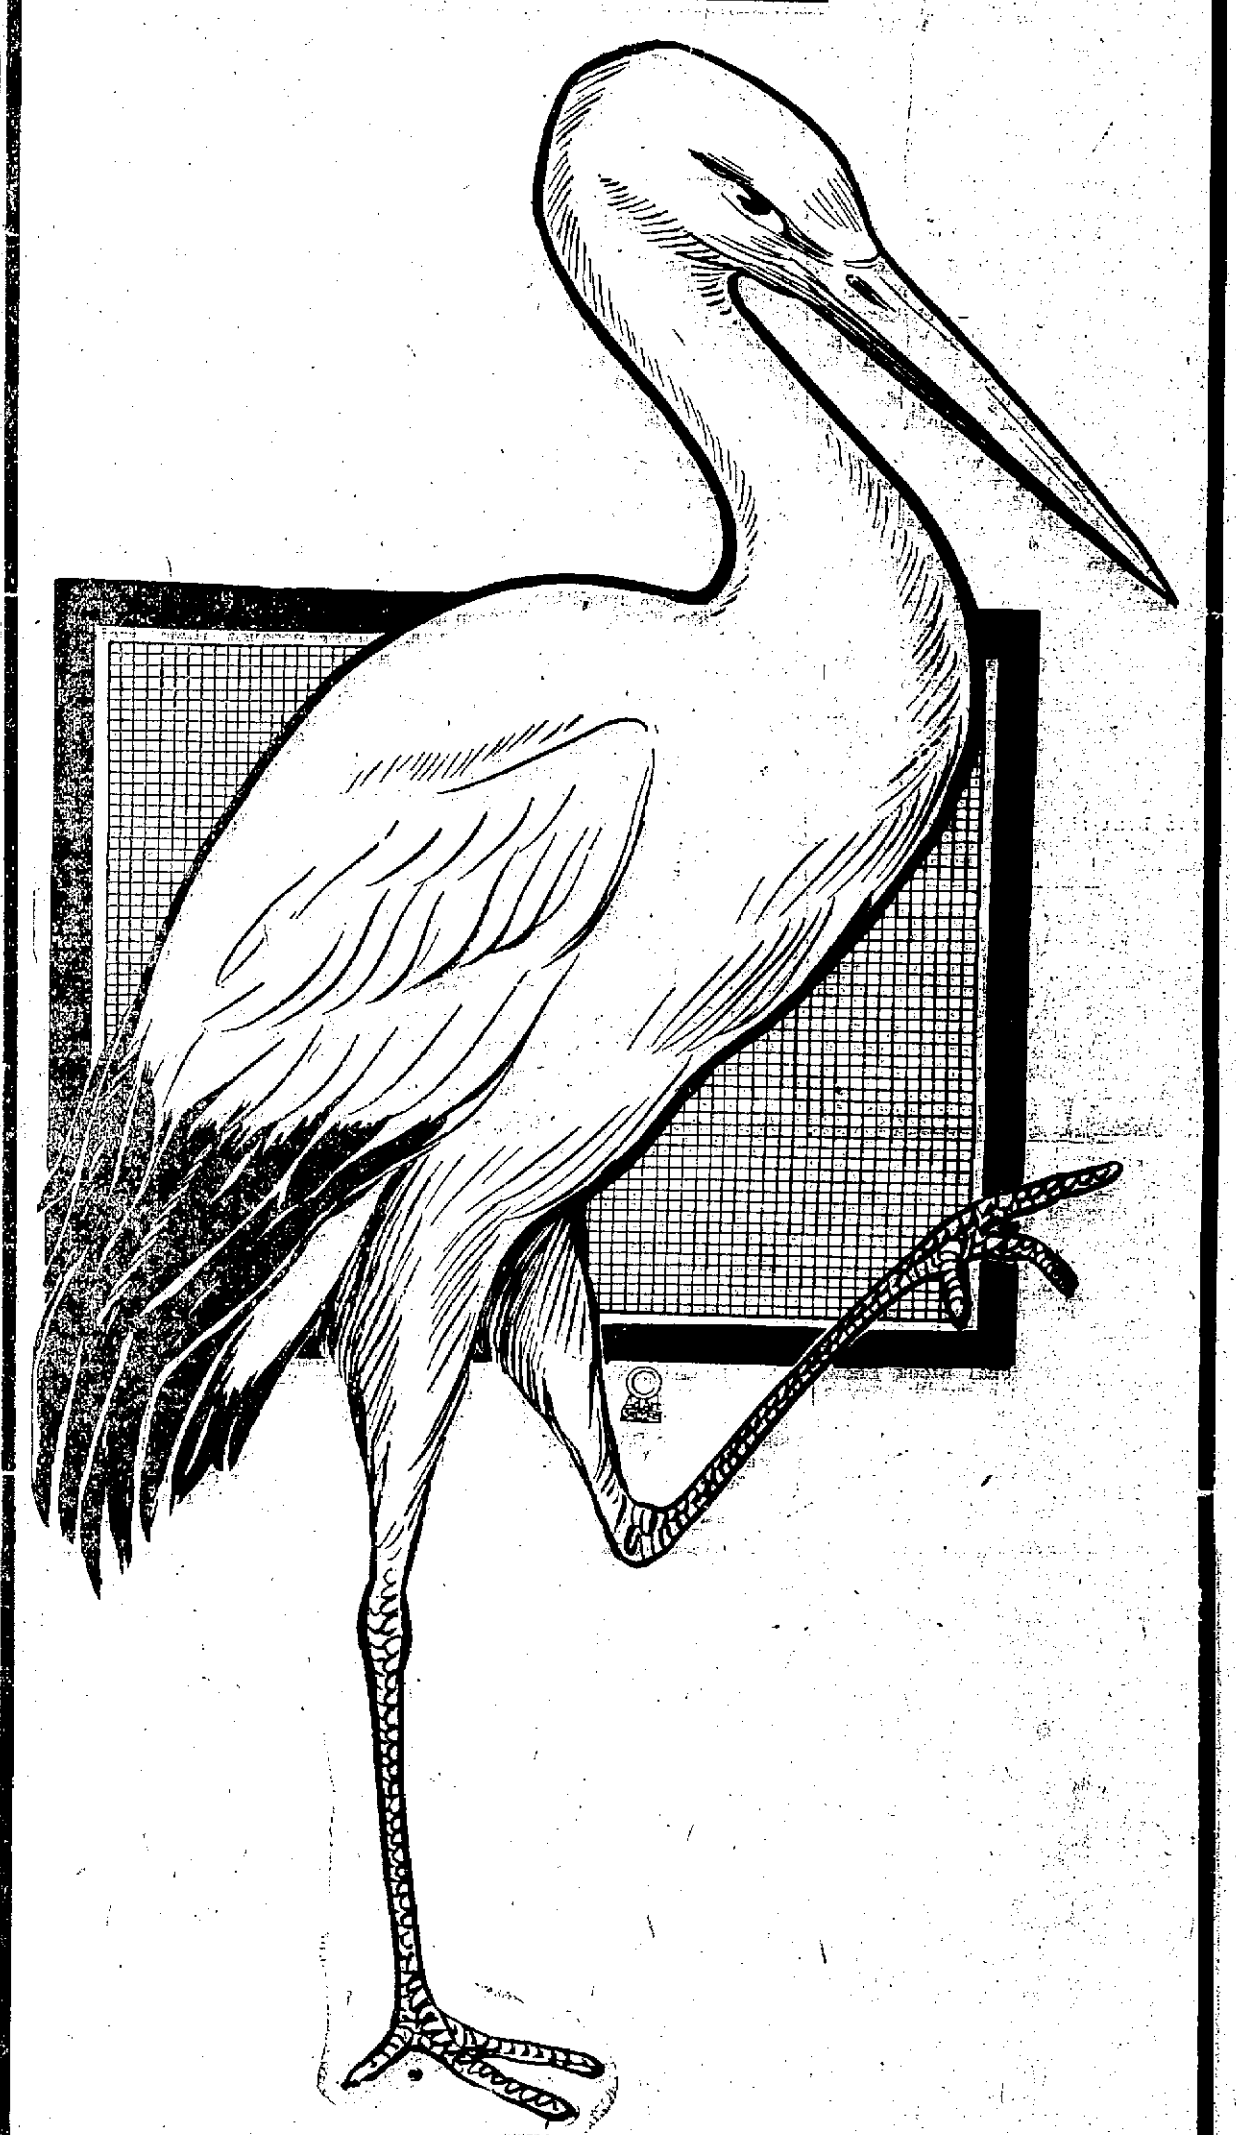

(1)—How can we tell him we want nothing more to do with him? Or should we say nothing? (2)—We do not care to continue his friendship and if he tries to get good again what should we say to him? (3)—Should we speak to him on the street? (4)—One of us has his picture. Should we give it back to him? CHUMS.

(1)—Say nothing at all to him, my dears. (2)—Be courteous, but very cool and indifferent. If he asks to be forgiven, tell him you were certain he did not know at the time how foolish he was and that you will overlook it this once, but never again. (3)—It is always polite to speak to an acquaintance, unless he has done something unpardonable. (4)—Probably more than one girl has his picture. I would not acknowledge him of enough importance to return it.

Things That Will Count. Health, necessity and success will eventually regulate foolishness.—De Push.

ARCHBISHOP MESSMER SPEAKS ON EDUCATION

EMPHASIZES THE NECESSITY OF RELIGIOUS TRAINING TO ITS SUCCESS.

MANY HEAR ADDRESS

Celebrated Pontifical Mass and Delivered Sermon at St. Mary's Church Sunday Morning.

That the problem of religious education is the greatest problem before the American people today, and that upon its success depended the solution of the evils most prominent in the public eye such as the social evil, juvenile crime, the struggle between capital and labor, and trust oppression was the opinion expressed by Archbishop Sebastian G. Messmer of Milwaukee in an address on "Education," delivered at St. Mary's church last evening.

The archbishop celebrated pontifical mass at ten o'clock in the morning, and delivered a brief sermon. He was assisted in the celebration of mass by the Rev. Dean E. E. Reilly, and the large church was filled at the morning service and a large number also heard the evening address.

"Education is a large subject," said the archbishop, in opening his address. "Christian education is also a very important subject. But why make this distinction? For the simple reason that it is a question whether education shall be education in the general acceptance of the term or Christian education. Education is of no account if it is not Christian education. It is of all importance, not of more importance, and there is no more vital question before the American people today than the problem of religious training."

"Very often Roman Catholics have been charged with being enemies of the public schools. This is true in one sense but not in another. We are not satisfied with the public schools because their training does not go far enough. Its appeal is exclusively to the head, and it does not touch the heart; it is neutral, not Christian education."

"The Catholic church is the very mother of education. Practically all European education owes its origin to the Catholic church, and the church was the first to establish public schools. In the very earliest centuries of the Christian era, in the fourth and fifth schools sprang up wherever the church obtained a foothold. Bishops, popes, and church councils made it obligatory for parishes to establish schools, and these schools not only educated their pupils in secular learning, but always gave them a Christian education."

"Christian schools were the only schools up to about a hundred years ago. Even after that unfortunate division in the church, the seceding protestants maintained their schools and persisted in the belief that their education must be Christian education. The idea of neutral schools in which religion should have no place dates back to the noted French infidel writer whose teachings are largely responsible for bringing on the French revolution. As infidelity spread, the idea of such neutral schools spread. It is one of the very doubtful accomplishments of modern times that we have public schools altogether silent on the matter of religion."

"The first schools in America were Christian schools. It was the commonly accepted belief of the Puritan settlers of New England that religion must be taught in the schools. They could not conceive of education without Christianity having a part in it, nor would they have tolerated it. The same was true of the southern and middle colonies and it is in only comparatively late years that the idea of non-sectarian education came into being and application.

"One of the natural causes that brought about the establishment of public schools in which religion is not taught was the settlement of the country by people of many different nationalities and religious faiths. These were grouped together in communities and it was impossible for them to agree upon what kind of religion to be taught in their schools; hence the exclusion of it altogether."

"Large numbers of protestants are in favor of religious education in the public schools. There has been organized in this country a Religious Education Association, numbering some 8,000 members, whose purpose is to spread the idea that the teaching of religion in the public schools is necessary to the proper education of children."

"The question before us is: What is real education? Can the so-called neutral education be called education in the fullest meaning of the word? On this point opinions differ, but the Roman Catholic church has always taken the position that religious education is necessary if secular education is to be of any value."

"There has been a tremendous change in the opinion of the American people on this question and the correctness of the Catholic position is being more and more clearly recognized. Present moral and religious conditions point to a radical defect in our public school education, and that is the neglect of moral and religious training. When we consider what man was made for, what he is, and what God intended him to be, no one can deny that it is not only the intellect but the heart and the will that need education. Such education alone can lead to goodness and virtuous living."

"Of what use is a man whose mind is stocked with treasures of knowledge, whose reasoning powers are unrivaled, if with all this he has corrupt principles in his heart and his conduct is evil? On the contrary he may be a source of great harm to society."

"The archbishop went on to comment on present day moral conditions, the alarming growth of juvenile crime, the astounding increase in the number of suicides, and the extent to which the social evil has grown. He quoted statistics to show that in New York state within a period of twenty years insanity had increased over a hundred per cent while the population increased but twenty-two per cent."

"Understand me that I do not believe that all insanity is the result of sin and vice, but statistics show beyond a doubt that these are the most fruitful sources. The insatiable hunger for the things of this world leads to the paucity of living that ends in a breakdown of the mind. Had people a better sense of values, and were able to weigh carefully the relative importance of things temporal and things eternal; were they living for the things of heaven more than for the things of earth, they would not lose body and mind and soul in their mad pace."

"The social evil, monopoly oppression, the elimination of poverty, the problem of capital and labor are not merely economic questions; they are also moral questions. If men acted according to the teachings of Christ these problems would confront us. Poverty is not alone the result of economic oppression; it is the result of extravagance, vicious living, and the failure to practice self-denial. Christian teachings are not observed."

"How are we to remedy conditions? By legislation? By education? There is no power on earth that can conquer sin but religion that tells man there is a God whose will is law, who punishes evil and rewards virtue. Laws may be means of repression, but what we want is prevention, and to prevent vice and crime we must teach religion to the child. In this way alone can they be made good citizens."

Archbishop Messmer characterized as foolish the idea that Sunday school training or the learning of the catechism was sufficient religious education. Not a few Catholics, he said, labor under this delusion.

"Here knowledge of religion is not religion. It is merely cold reason; the heart is untouched. No one has a better knowledge of Christianity than Satan, but nevertheless there is an impassable gulf between him and God. Thousands know as much about our religion as you or I but are unbelievers. Education does not consist merely in instruction. There is need of the Christian example, correction, advice and influence. All these must be brought to bear on the mind and heart, and if a child is to have good character he must be trained into it as he grows. If mere instruction in the catechism was necessary we might well dispense with our 5,000 parochial schools, and the $40,000,000 it costs to maintain them. Our Lutheran and Anglican brethren also appreciate this need and in many parts of the country provide their own schools."

"Christian education in the home is even more important than in the school. It must form the very foundation of education, for if the children do not learn religion in the home, whatever else is done is built on sand. No impressions last longer than those received in the home. It is there the children must absorb their Christian sentiments and acquire good habits. The training of the child is done in the home whether desired or not, and if the education there is not Christian it is non-Christian. In some cases it is true the school must largely take the place of the home, but parents either are not capable or able to properly care for their children."

"I do not believe the problem of religious education is insoluble; neither have I any faith in moral education without religion. All true morality must rest on religion, for this alone can make it appeal to the heart."

The archbishop closed with a few remarks on the condition of the parish and urged upon its members the building of a parochial school at as early a date as possible. He expressed the hope that in another year he would be able to dedicate a parochial school for St. Mary's parish.

Beer Exposed to Light for 5 Minutes Becomes Undrinkable

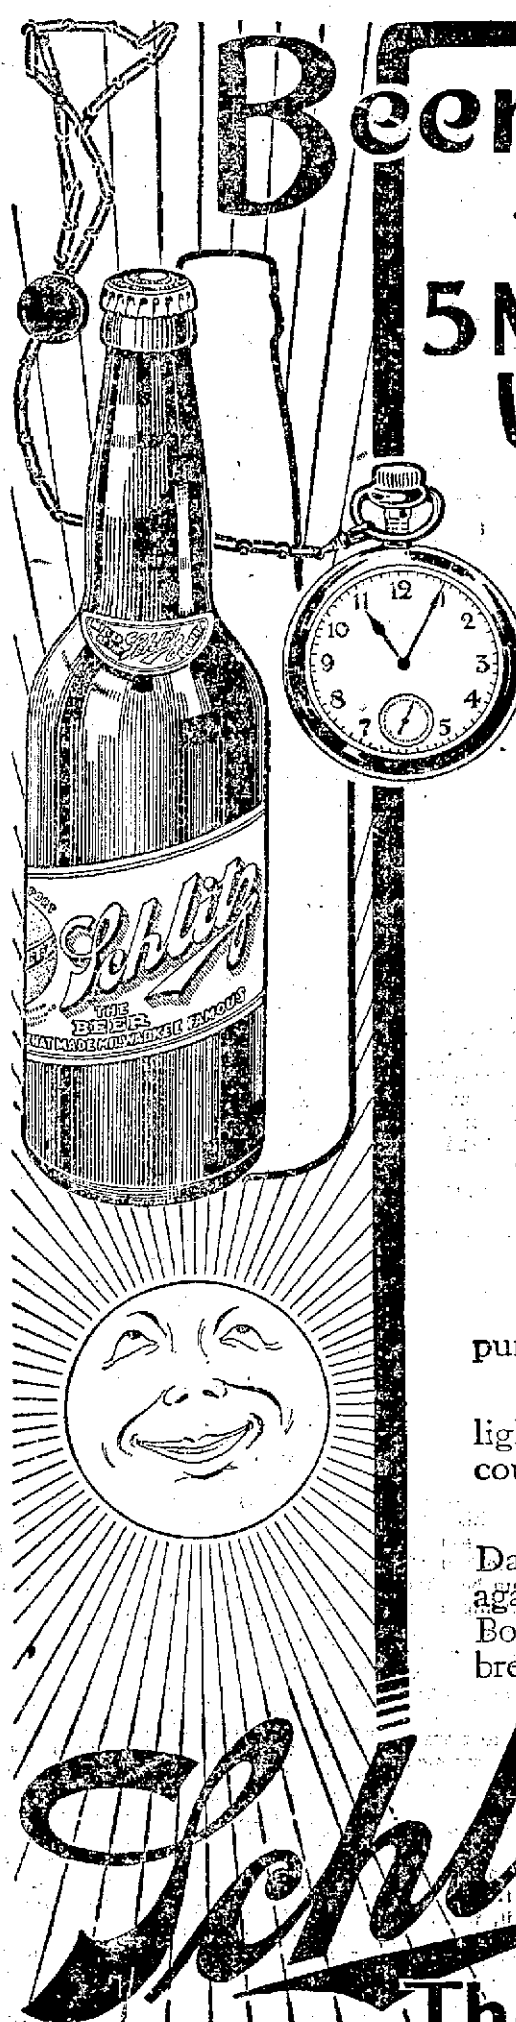

This is not our statement, but the deliberate opinion of one of the most renowned scientists in the world. Read the entire statement:

"We have tested beers repeatedly, placing the bottles in the direct sunlight, and testing the same after one, two, three and five minutes exposure, found that the beer with three and five minutes exposure became undrinkable on account of the peculiar odor developed. The detrimental effect of light upon beer can be successfully counteracted by the employment of brown or dark colored glass bottles, and such bottles are, therefore, recommended."—Wahl-Henius Institute of Fermentology.

It is not enough that beer be brewed pure, it must be kept pure.

Many Americans prefer beer in a light bottle. Most brewers follow the course of least resistance.

Light starts decay even in pure beer. Dark glass gives the best protection against light. Schlitz is sold in Brown Bottles to protect its purity from the brewery to your glass.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES.

NOVELS.

(By Howard L. Raab.)

THE novel is a time-killing device in which the reader is brought face to face with love, adventure and humor. However, nobody thinks anything about the rhetoric so long as the heroine lifts her face to that of some male guest in the last chapter, a woman softly on his shirt front in the act of surrender.

The novel consists of a plot entirely surrounded by accidents, the last and most fatal of which is a church wedding. These accidents always come just in time to prevent some body from being the denouement.

The denouement is a dramatic episode in which a wayward husband with the clove habit is foiled by an automatic pistol and the widow faints on the right shoulder of a disinterested friend who loves her for herself alone, plus the life insurance money. This kind of a denouement puts all concerned in a comfortable and pious frame of mind, and is used with much success by our leading novelists.

The most popular form of novel is the mystery story, in which the culprit plays hide and seek with the reader and is finally discovered by a strawberry birth mark on his left elbow, just prior to being pinched in a full dress suit. This kind of novel is usually run as a serial story, as there are no less than thirty separate and distinct jumping off places at which murder is about to be transacted with considerable earnestness.

The historical novel is an Indiana cereal which convinces the reader that fiction is stranger than truth. People who read historical novels for the purposes of enlightenment are liable to learn that Lord Cornwallis surrendered at the battle of Gettysburg and that Madame Pompadour was the favorite daughter of Oliver Cromwell. This kind of history is very profitable, however, and requires no other ingredients than a vivid imagination and a self-filling fountain pen.

The magazine novel is a hectic variety which is bolstered up with full-page illustrations of social butterflies who are long on negligee and short on brains. The magazine novel which does not show the heroine reclining on a brass bed in a tea wrapper or trying to faint through a veiled oak floor in the cloudy filaments of the boudoir is a dismal failure.

Poor Nourishment in Grass.
Horses, under natural conditions, sleep much less than men and spend far more time every day in eating. There is little nourishment in grass, in proportion to its bulk, and the horse is forced to give so much time to eating that it would be ruinous to human industry if like conditions existed among men.

Tagged Salmon.
Scientific investigators who have to trace the travels of salmon in the northern waters are tagging the fish and setting them free. If you find a tag in your can of salmon report it to the fishery commission and not to the dog license clerk.

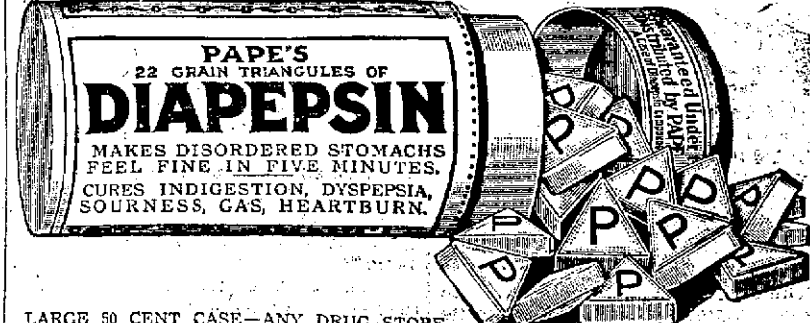

Cannot Be Too Careful.
As many accidents have occurred from lightning this season, it is well for people to observe rules of prudence and to keep out of dangerous places and avoid coming in contact with dangerous objects while thunder storms are going on. The laws governing the electric fluid ought to be well enough known to persons of ordinary education and observation to afford them a considerable measure of self-protection.

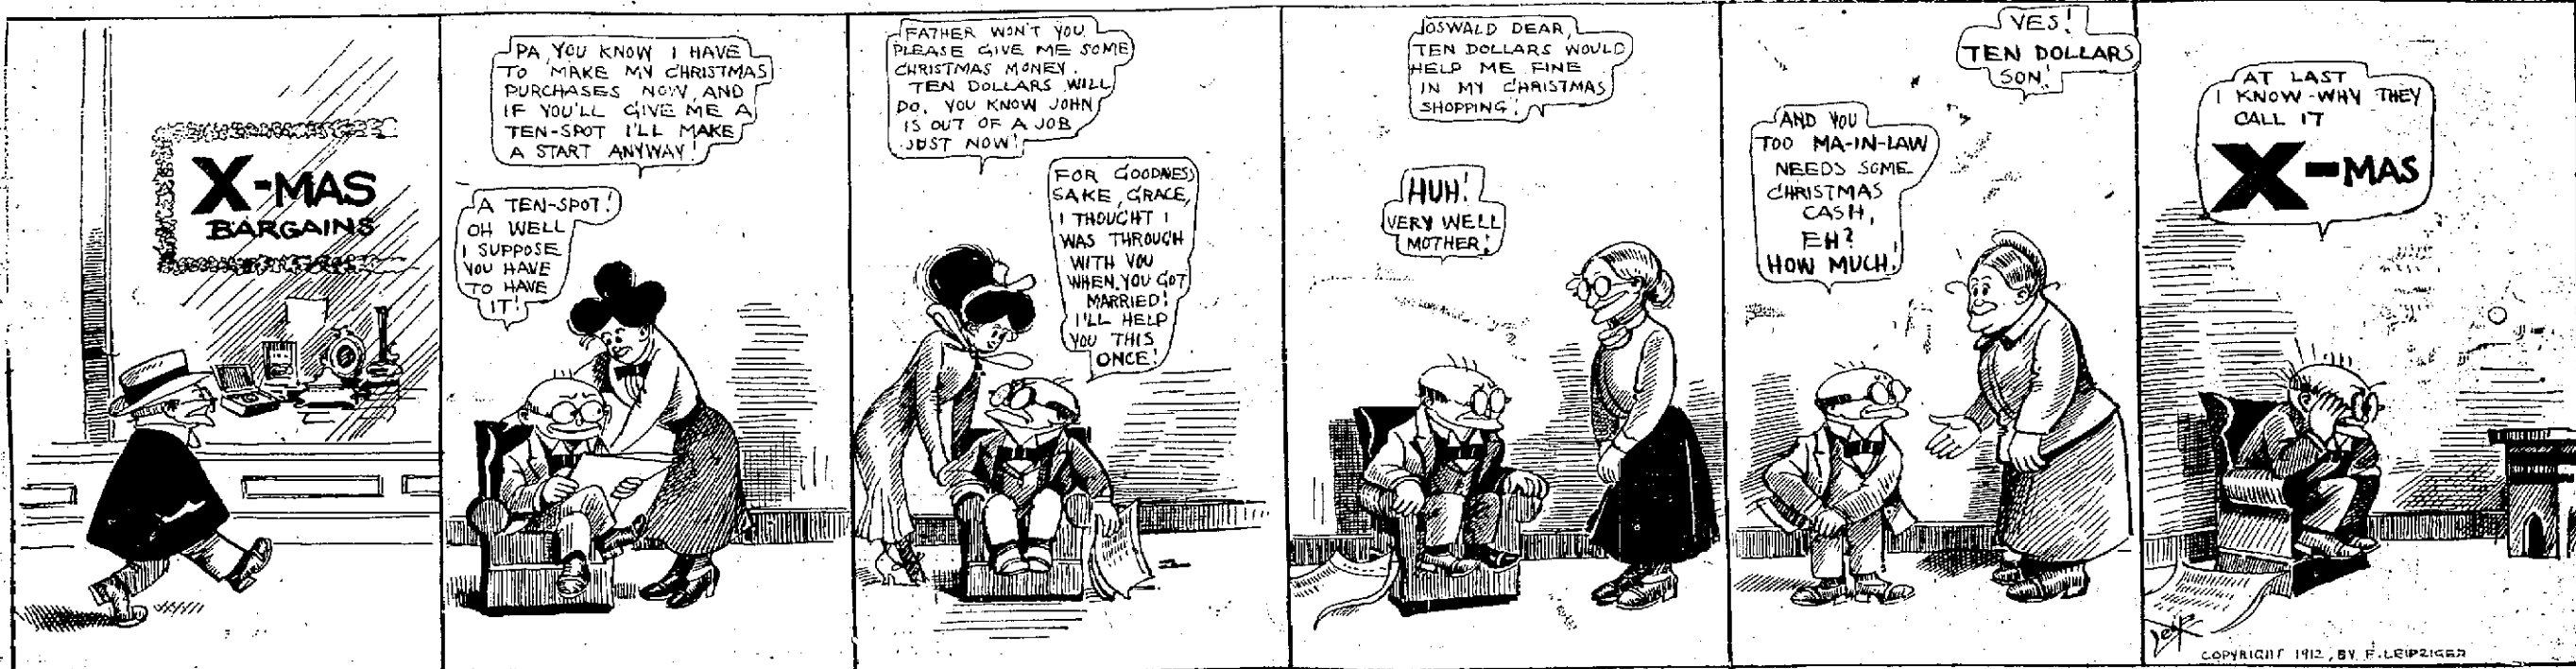

Athletic California Women.
One of the California women's rowing clubs does not stop short at the management of light craft, but practices the heavier rowing of the navy. Their club house is a ship, they wear a dress something like that of a blue-jacket, and they do not hesitate on occasion to go aloft.

The Rise of Canada.
Canada is no longer a colony—the word is parochial, misleading, obsolete, and serves but to dull the imagination. Canada in the last two decades has become a nation, and more than any ordinary conception of that name can signify.—Victoria (B. C.) Times.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—Father's Christmas troubles are beginning early

HIS RISE TO POWER

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of "The Mau Higher Up"

"They" relapsed into silence. John looked out of the window, awaiting in cold silence the senator's next words. Murchell preserved his usual impassive front. It was not the first time he had encountered the intolerance of youth. But never before, save during the Sheehan trial, had the intolerance pierced the crust of the man.

He broke the silence. "What do you want to do?"

"A good many things you wouldn't understand—principally, I suppose, to smash you and your organization. That probably sounds funny to you."

Murchell did not laugh. He merely felt pity for an impractical young dreamer.

"You can't smash the organization."

"It must be smashed, because it exists to deprive the people of the right of self government."

"A pretty phrase. It's common sense politics. The people don't want to govern themselves—they can't. They need some one to take the burden from them. How are you going to smash us?"

"It may be simpler than you think, Senator Murchell. When the people understand what you are they'll smash you."

The other smiled pityingly. "You think because you've sent a few poor devils to jail you're a man of destiny, don't you? You think I'm merely a wicked old fellow who's got power and is using it for his own selfish ends. If I were just that you could smash me. But I'm more than that. I am an institution—a part of a necessary institution, one that society, that property, that business, can't get along without. You can smash William Murchell—that is, put some one in his place. But you can't smash the institution. And you can't judge a system by its incidental errors."

John smiled, not very happily. "I've heard that before. The weakness of your argument is that the errors seem to be essential. Government isn't, or shouldn't be, merely a matter of force, nor exist only as the servant of property, even if all you say is true. And I've got to go on."

"And where'll you come out?"

"I? You will try to break me. You may succeed. But you will observe

"I repeat, I'm not for sale." Murchell suddenly rose and put a heavy hand on John's shoulder. "You said you have little to lose. You have much—a future. You've gone out of your way to attack me. You're a fool. But I—like you, man. And I'd like to save that future for you."

For a moment John stared at him, incredulous. "He went to the window, staring out wonderingly. He saw a strange thing—Jeremy Applegate stumping across the square and pausing under the flag, looking up. The veteran's hand rose, as though in salute; then, arrested midway, it fell limply, and Jeremy marched on."

John pointed. "There, senator, is one who entered the service of your institution. Now he is a broken spirited old man with just enough soul left to be ashamed. If I became part of your machine, in the end I'd become like that—different in size perhaps, but the same in kind. I," he said, quietly, "prefer your enemy; it's safer. You represent an institution. I stand for a principle, a fundamental principle. You can smash John Dunne—oh, very easily, no doubt. But, Senator Murchell, you can't smash the principle!"

The senator did not often permit himself the luxury of losing his temper, but he was exceedingly close to it just then. The friendship he had offered to a young man whom he liked strangely well had been contemptuously rejected, and the hurt was all the deeper because he had broken the rule of a lifetime to make the offer. He carefully waited until the emotion had subsided before speaking.

"It's a good deal simpler to state a principle than to follow it in practice. And you can't judge politics by one year's experience. However—"

He stopped long enough to put on his hat.

"You went out of your way to denounce me. You took a fine when I'm needing friends to do it, too. In spite of that I made you an offer in good faith. If there's anything in you I'd have given you the chance to prove it."

"I," he concluded, and he spoke as of some divine edict, fixed and immutable—"I rarely offer friendship to those who fight me—never twice."

He went out.

The East ridge colony was gone, scattering its charms broadcast from Lakewood to Bar Harbor. Only the Hampdens were left, and they were soon to depart. Katherine and her mother to go abroad for the latter's health—which, to be sure, was so good as to be worth preserving. John and Haig had arranged to make together one September evening their farewell pilgrimage to the ridge.

That evening John spent a great deal of care over his toilet.

He drove to the house of Silas Hicks, where Haig, wisely avoiding the hospitality of the hotel, had his rooms. Somewhat to his dismay, he was informed that Haig had discovered some mysterious errand requiring his attention, had departed a half hour earlier and had left word that he would later meet John at their Mecca.

"That's funny," muttered John as he drove away. He strongly suspected the validity of Haig's errand and debated seriously the advisability of turning back and sending his farewells by note, pleading as excuse for his non-appearance some unexpected business matter. He solemnly assured himself that he was a fool, both for having dabbled with unhappiness all summer and for going now on a journey that could only intensify futile longings.

He sustained the indictment by continuing his journey. When he found Katherine, they strolled, Katherine chatting unconcernedly, to a seat in a retired corner of the grounds—only the fact would not have been significant to John—where she had sat so long after her talk with Warren Blake.

She leaned back in one end of the seat. He sat at the other, as far away from her as he could, half facing her. She was not really beautiful—her features were too firm for that—yet even another than John might have been excused for thinking her so in the softening light of the rising moon. Only her eyes, softly lustrous in the pale light, marked her suppressed excitement.

"Do you realize," she said, "this is the first time we've been alone this summer? You have really managed it very awkwardly." As though she had not done all the managing!

He had nothing to say.

"Am I such an ogre, or have you been afraid that I'd propose to you again?"

"I haven't been fool enough to take that seriously," he said quickly. "And I'm old enough to know the danger of playing with fire. At least," he added, "I ought to have known it."

He could not help, thinking of the months to come when, with less engrossing tasks to take his mind from the ache, he must renew the loneliness, grown more poignant, of the last winter. He wondered now at his weakness in letting himself, despite his knowledge of her and of what she meant to him, be drawn again within the circuit of her charm.

He became aware that she was speaking, with that amazing courage which was always hers.

"I am sorry," she said. "But I haven't been fair to you. The things father works for are what appeal to me, not the things you dream of."

The prestige, the power, the knowledge that I belong to the men who are conquering, not dreams or ideals, count with me. It isn't very pretty, is it, from your point of view? But it's true. I—I could wish it were different. Last summer it was different. I was trying to decide what I wanted. I—I have always been more or less in love with you ever since I can remember. And I saw you were beginning to care. I unsexed myself; I pursued, to learn whether you were what I wanted. I tried to believe, to make you believe, that I could have you and the rest. And I don't greatly blame myself for that. Because I am a woman must I sit passively by and wait for happiness to come? I was drifting between two ideals, but—struggling against it, of course—toward you. Do you know it's your fault I didn't drift further? You wouldn't take me. You made a mistake the night of that rally, being so cynical in your notions of a poor man's honor. You ought to have taken me in your arms and made me go to you. I should have gone—gladly—faithfully too. But you wouldn't."

He listened unresponsive to her words that, bating sometimes, fell in low, measured tones with a curious, underlying regretfulness.

"Now it is too late. I've had time to think, to weigh you against the other things. Last winter taught me how much they mean to me. And I find you—wanting. This summer has not changed that. What you ask costs too much."

"I ask nothing."

"True! I forget—you ask nothing. Last summer you need not have asked."

far more than you'll ever have otherwise. What I want to do isn't so terrible. It is very simple. I can't see why a few are so strongly against it. And it doesn't mean the sacrifice you think. Already it has brought victory and the consideration of men you so much desire. In the end, if we have the spirit to fight and wait—"

His stammering phrases halted. He became aware of her closed eyes, her unresponsiveness. She opened her eyes and looked at him. His rough clasp relaxed. She shook her head and pushed herself away, leaning back in the seat.

"Ah," she murmured, "it is too late! You can't make me want you enough."

"It isn't too late if you care—"

"Is caring everything? You know it isn't. If it were you wouldn't make conditions. You would use your brains, your talents, to work out a career. You would have accepted Senator Murchell's offer."

"You think that?" he cried. "Then you don't care!"

"Ah," she said resentfully, "you can say that? Do you think I could unsex myself as I have done for you for a fancy? I—But you wouldn't understand. It is a very practical matter. Life isn't all moonlight. It is all very beautiful to give one's life to an ideal. And you're very splendid now in the flush of your first victory. You would be still splendid, fighting a brave, losing fight while you were young, but when you were a broken down, middle aged failure, cast aside, a career out of the question, do you think that I—"

It wouldn't be romantic then. I'd be always looking up at the men I once knew, the men who were conquering, doing big things, and I'd regret. And I'd hate you then."

"It seems," he cried bitterly, "I inspire little confidence. I'm told by every one before I have tried long, while I am still winning, that I'm doomed to be a failure!"

"Now it is you who will not see." She became more gentle. "Do you think I could care for a weakling? It isn't you we distrust, but your ideal. I know more of politics than I did a year ago. Your dream will get you only disappointment. Even the big men who have done the fine, good things for this country used the forces they found at hand, compromised with evil to create good. And their good stands."

Suddenly she leaned toward him and placed a hand on his arm. "Look, John!" She pointed to the north star gleaming palely in the moonlight. (To be continued.)

"Horse Now Better Than Ever. Everything bearing upon the history of the horse indicates that the percherons and shire horses of to-day are much heavier and greater in bulk than wild horses ever were, anywhere on the globe. The horse has made gradual and steady progress for thousands of years. He is a better animal than he ever was before."

Screamingly Funny. "We will now," said the clownish member of the vaudeville musical team, "do a nocturne." After which he knocked his fellow player down with a slapstick and turned a hand-spring.

"You can't make me want you enough." You will do me the credit to remember that I ask you nothing that would cost more than you are willing to pay."

"That isn't true," he said in sudden roughness. "You—it is why I'm a fool for having come near you—are tempting me with every word you speak."

"Am I tempting you, I wonder?" Her voice became uncertain. "I—I beg you to believe that I haven't meant it—to remember that I shouldn't be good for you. I have no wish to—to be a Delilah."

The tremor in her voice set him to trembling. Then, without conscious intention, he was holding her in a close, rough clasp and crying to her to go with him. She did not resist, and she did not respond. She lay inert in his arms, passively suffering his hot kisses, her eyes closed, her face white.

"My dear, my dear! Don't you see? You're fighting against the thing that means your happiness. I'm not afraid to ask you, for I know I can give you

DINNER STORIES

In a southern town a bank was organized by colored men. Sambo was one of the first depositors. He left $10 one day. Several months later he called at the bank.

"Ah want my money," he demanded of the colored cashier.

"Niggah, you ain't got no money in heah," answered the latter.

"Yes, Ah has," retorted Sambo. "Ah put ten dollars in heah six months ago."

"Of co'se you did," said the cashier, "but de interest done eat dat up long ago!"

Johnny had been told to sit down and study his lesson quietly. In a few minutes his mother heard a fretful voice exclaim.

"Mother, didn't you tell me the other day that God knows everything?"

"Why, of course, my son," she answered.

"Well," he responded dubiously,

"I have been waiting for ten minutes for him to tell me how much ten times five is and I don't believe he knows."

Two men were hotly discussing the merits of a book. Finally one of them, himself an actor, said to the other:

"No, John you can't appreciate it. You never wrote a book yourself."

"No, retorted John, "and I never laid an egg, but I'm a better judge of an omelet than any hen in the state."

"Well," said the doctor cheerfully, "how do you feel this morning? Any aches or pains?"

"Yes," answered the patient, "it hurts me to breathe; but the only trouble now seems to be with my breath."

"Oh, said the physician, still more cheerfully, "I'll give you something that will soon stop that."

A Nation of Flower Lovers. Rich and poor, the English are a nation of flower-lovers, and the soil and climate of England are not backward in supplying us, on almost every acre of our soil, with floral beauties rich and varied enough to satisfy all natural needs of the mind.—Country Gentleman.

A Long Wait. "What I'm waitin' fur," said Uncle Jerry Peebles, "is a chance to vote for some man that isn't the 'people's candidate,' but is just runnin' fur office on his own hook."

When you feel that your liver and bowels need help take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. Substitute for Calomel. Calomel is effective, but dangerous—causing bad after-effects.

Olive Tablets are especially made to take the place of Calomel. Dr. Edwards for years has been Calomel's foe. He saw its dangers and its disadvantages in 17 years' practice, treating patients for all kinds of liver and bowel complaints. In his efforts to do without Calomel he developed his now famous little olive-oil-colored tablets. Olive Tablets are mild but effective. Safe and sure. Pleasant to take but unfailing in results.

Olive Tablets oil the bowels just enough to start Nature's own action, and they tone up the liver at the same time. "They are made from a rare combination of vegetable compounds mixed with olive oil."

"Every little Olive Tablet has a movement all its own."

BRONCHITIS PREVALENT

Brooklyn, N. Y., Man Tells Best Remedy.

At this season of year with such sudden changes, it is so easy to take cold, and almost before one is aware there is inflammation in the bronchial tubes—a hard cough and unless checked in time chronic pulmonary troubles may result.

Wibur Adams of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "A severe bronchial trouble contracted in January caused me much difficulty about breathing. My chest felt clogged up and there was considerable soreness, all of which made me quite uneasy, besides being very painful."

I tried different remedies without help, but I am glad to say that Vinol cured my bronchial trouble which had lasted for three months. My breathing is all right now, and the soreness entirely gone from my chest."

Vinol contains the curative, healing principles of fresh cod livers (without oil) and tonic iron. We guaranteed it to be delicious in taste and to satisfy you with its medicinal effects. Smith Drug Co., Janesville, Wis.

When Woodrow, statesman good

FORTY YEARS AGO

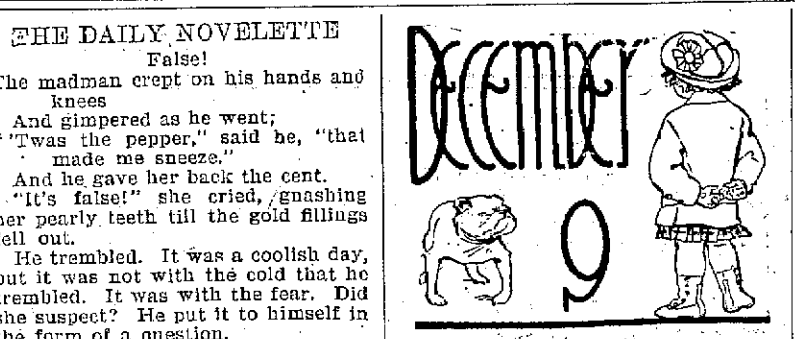

Janesville Daily Gazette, December
9, 1872.—Frame Up: The framework
of the new passenger depot is in position.
We have been inadvertently led into several extravagant expressions
regarding the size, beauty, convenience,
etc., of this depot, which the
very modest looking frame makes us regret. But perhaps the finishing touches will make it an imposing structure.
Brief Items: The Y. M. C. A. library was reopened to the public on Saturday.
The horse disease is subsiding. Receipts of grain, wood and hay were largely increased on Saturday. One of our merchants says that his sales
for the month of November fell off
nine hundred dollars in consequence of the horse disease.
Milling operations are seriously retarded by the scarcity of water.
The price of coal advanced one dollar today. The modest sum of fifteen dollars will now purchase a ton.
The newly elected county officials take possession of their offices on the first Monday in January.
Dr. W. A. Harvey will leave this city on Wednesday for Chicago, his

"It's false!" she cried, gnashing
her pearly teeth till the gold fillings
fell out.
He trembled. It was a coolish day,
but it was not with the cold that he trembled. It was with the fear. Did she suspect? He put it to himself in the form of a question.
"It's false!" she cried again.
"It's not!" he shouted. "What's false?"
"Villain!" she hissed. "For six years we have been wife and man,
and for six years has that shiny
black goatee been the apple of my eye, the subject of my every boast.
And now, and now, I know it to be
false!"
With a start of terror he raised his hand to his chin, but she was too quick for him. With a bound she was upon him, her white hand on his goatee.
There was a sickening, rending
sound, and the goatee was in her hand. She looked at him and her face grew white.
"You!" she whispered. "You!"
His fiendish laughter woke the neighbors.
